ABS House Prices Hold Firm for Tasmania

The latest update for the ABS Index of Established House Prices shows a modest increase in house price for Hobart of 0.8 per cent at the end of last year said Housing Industry Association (HIA).

HIA's Exectuive Director, Stuart Clues said that the ABS Index of Established House Prices improved by 0.8 per cent bucking a national decline of 1.0 per cent in the December 2011 quarter.

"The fact that house prices remained steady in Tasmania despite the difficult trading environment shows housing is still considered a solid investment and is underpinned by strong demand for housing in a tight rental rental market.

"There has never been a better time to build a home with builders having the capacity to do the work, falling interest rates and strong demand for rental properties.

"The ABS existing house price series reveals annual declines in established house prices for all eight capital cities, and quarterly declines with the exceptions of Hobart, Perth and Canberra," said Stuart Clues.

"Today's update does bear some resemblance to the annual declines evident in late 2008 and early 2009. There are, of course, enormous variations in house prices within and across cities (and regions) in Australia, but as was the case in 2008/09, the widespread price plunge portended by some for 2011 predictably never emerged.

"Lower interest rates will feed into an improved environment in 2012, although we won't see a return to widespread strong house price growth this year," Mr Clues said.

The capital city project (new) house price index rose by a bare 0.2 per cent in the December 2011 quarter to be up by 1.5 per cent on a year earlier.

Across capital cities, in the December 2011 quarter the project (new) house price index increased by 0.7 per cent in Sydney, 0.1 per cent in Adelaide, 0.4 per cent in Perth, and 0.1 per cent in Darwin. Prices were flat in Brisbane, Hobart, and Canberra, and fell by 0.3 per cent in Melbourne.

Across capital cities, in the December 2011 quarter the established house price index increased by 0.5 per cent in Perth, 0.8 per cent in Hobart, and by 0.7 per cent in Canberra. The index fell by 1.0 per cent in Sydney, 1.6 per cent in Melbourne, 1.3 per cent in Brisbane, 1.6 per cent in Adelaide, and 1.4 per cent in Darwin. These results will be subject to revision by the ABS, as will the September quarter results.
