

the voice of the industry

19 June 2017

NEW NATIONAL PRESIDENT FOR HIA

Pino Monaco has been elected National President of the Housing Industry Association (HIA), the voice of Australia's residential building industry.

His involvement with the HIA commenced over 30 years ago and during that time he has served on various HIA committees and task forces at a state and national level as a committeeman, Vice Chair and Chair. Pino has been a long serving member of the WA Regional Executive Committee.

Following two years as Vice President, Pino was President for the HIA WA region from 2005-2007. At the conclusion of his WA Presidency, Pino joined HIA's National Board of Directors in 2007.

He succeeds former National President, Ross Lang, who completed his term on 25 May this year. Pino praised the commitment of Ross during the past two years.

"Ross' commitment and drive to serve as National President of HIA's Board of Directors over the past two years has been a legacy he can be proud of and his continuation as Immediate Past President on the Board is very welcomed".

"It is a great honour to be elected National President and I look forward to the challenge of leading this great organisation and building on the significant legacy of the many distinguished Presidents that have gone before."

"We have some challenging times ahead. Not the least of which are rising to the industry challenges of training our industry, making some sense of a nearly broken planning system, and confronting the continuing issues of deteriorating housing affordability and a lack of appropriate housing supply. I look forward to advocating these fundamental issues for our industry during my term as National President", said Pino.

Pino is a director of the Perth based, GV Lawyers, heading up their commercial litigation team.

For further information contact:

Shane Goodwin, Managing Director

0418 568 990

MEDIA RELEASE